Ladies' Column.

Indoor Complaints.

Half the ills of women, physical ills, arise from the want of fresh air. They breathe a vitiated atmosphere from the cradle to the grave. Close rooms, hot stoves, odors from kitchen and nursery, do their work, undermining the constitution, sapping the vitality, weakening the purpose, until a languid performance of daily routine exhausts the strength, and there is no energy left for extra exertion. We have known women to die of indoor illness, but it is a slow and terrible process.

We knew of one hearty woman capable of doing the work of a family, who was confined by the desire to live genteelly on small means to a narrow boarding-house life. Call it was dyspepsia, then inflammatory rheumatism, and enlargement of the liver, finally insanity, and then death.

We have known another bright, intelligent woman; twenty years of whose life was spent in a small, secluded spot in the country, from which she emerged into a madhouse. Intelligent care, exercise and pleasant society cured her—the doctor fortunately understanding her case, and her subsequent home, which her husband took pains to arrange as nearly as possible according to his directions, has been healthful and happy.

There is no use of quarreling over the necessity that compels most women to the performance of household duties. But we should do them seriously, to "think out" the question of how much time it is necessary to give to the sedentary, and consider if it is not just as important five a day, to take care of the sweetness it is to come for others.

Fresh air, fresh air is what most women need. Fresh air to decarbonize the blood, to give color to the cheek, and light to the eyes. The sallow complexion, the dull, heavy step tell the whole story.

Now we are not going to tell how women are to get fresh air; every woman must figure that out for herself. Is there any need for so much reading? for such incessant work? Can you not divide up your cares? Or get some one to help you? Can you not go out of doors, or visit a neighbor instead of making bed quilts, or embroidering the baby's sacque? If you can, pray do.—Demorest's Monthly.

Beecher on Dancing.

Mr. Beecher took occasion in a recent sermon to speak of recreation and amusements in the home circle as being healthful and natural, and we append what he says about dancing:

"Some persons when they join the church think they must put all the glee and mirth out of their lives. Don't do it! If a love song ripples up to the surface of your heart, sing it! sing it! Do not let it die! My second mother! for I remember no other! was my ideal of womanly gentleness, propriety and elegance. She used before marriage to be quite a belle, and was often known to trip the light fantastic toe. One evening, as my father played a tune on a violin, my mother arose and in the most graceful manner possible to conceive, commenced to dance round the room. I didn't know what to make of it. My father looked on with surprise. Never in the course of my whole life had I seen such a thing attempted in my father's house. It was delicious, and I got a lesson then which has lasted me ever since. I think to this day if mother had danced oftener and said catechism a little less, it would have been better for us all. If you have a talent for dancing, cultivate it; make the most of them, whether voice, foot, or eye."

Throughout Germany, wherever females can be employed to advantage, they are taken in preference to young men. At Munich the clerks and bookkeepers in the banks are nearly all young and handsome girls. At the depots, many of those who attend the windows for the sale of tickets are girls, and the cashiers in all the cafes and restaurants are of the same sex. They are generally very expert at figures and in mental arithmetic have no superiors. In view of the fact that so many females are employed in the rougher and harder descriptions of laboring work, it speaks well for the sex that they are seeking and securing more desirable and lucrative employment.

Preserved fruits often either ferment, mould or candy, unless they are placed in air-tight cans, and these are not always within reach of the housewife. Now these three effects are produced by three separate causes—they ferment because they were not boiled enough; they mould from being kept in a damp place; they candy from being boiled too long. If paper dipped in whiskey or alcohol were laid directly over preserves and jellies it will often prevent them from spoiling. Preserves should be kept in a dark but dry place, and in arranging them on the shelves of a store-closet they should not come in contact with the plastering.

Fashion Notes.

Breastpins are entirely out of fashion.

Trailing skirts have become obsolete.

Chinchilla will be a favorite fur next winter.

Corduroy sacques trimmed with yak lace are worn for driving.

Striped kids are the last Parisian novelty. Nobody wears them—they are horrid.

Postilion waists are among the most fashionable just now.

A new lace is called web. It is of the finest texture, and of a light blue color. It will be used to trim ball dresses.

Salvini scarfs and neck ties, in the most brilliant colors, suggestive of a glorious sunset on an Italian lake, are in the market.

A New York lady has a yard of lace said to have been made in 1730. She makes a collar of it, and unappreciative, maybe envious, people say it looks much like a dirty sofa tidy.

which can be cured by a timely resort to this standard preparation, as has been proved by the hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. It is acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever introduced for the relief and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Throat, Pains or Soreness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lungs, &c. Wistar's Balsam does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.
